Q: Proving the absolute convergence of an infinite sum by using a given function that is periodic. $\mathop{\displaystyle \sum \limits_{n=1}^{\infty}}\left(\frac{1}{n(n+1)}-\frac{1}{n}\right)$ I was wondering if I could get help with this problem. I figured out that the function has no upper bound since the limit would be undefined but I am unsure how to prove the absolute convergence by using a theorem that requires that the function has an upper bound or something. A: As mentioned above, there is no upper bound since the limit is ∞, but we do have a lower bound. $a_n-a_{n+1} \ge a_n-a_n = 0$, so $a_n = a_{n+1}$ for all n. If we let $b_n = a_n - a_{n+1}$, we can write $a_n = a_{n+1} + b_n$, which is to say that a_n is a telescoping series. The proof that b_n is nonnegative is straightforward: $b_n = a_n - a_{n+1} \ge 0$. To see that b_n is nonincreasing, it suffices to observe that $a_n - a_{n+1} \le a_n-a_{n-1}$ for all n. If the sum converges absolutely, then the series b_n is Cauchy, which is to say $b_n \to 0$. We conclude $a_n \to 0$ because $b_n \ge 0$ and $a_n = a_{n+1} + b_n$. Thus the sum must converge absolutely. Further evidence of peripheral influences on regional cerebral blood flow and metabolism. Inferences about the cerebral metabolic consequences of local functional deficits are frequently made from the difference in regional cerebral blood flow (rCBF) during the presence and absence of a local perturbation. The rationale behind this approach is that, when an inadequate modulator of rCBF is removed, the metabolism will be maintained at its set-point level. This implies that a blood flow modulator can induce long-lasting changes in

[Follow up of patients with pulmonary tuberculosis sequelae after treatment with rifampicin, isoniazid, ethambutol and pyrazinamide]. A regimen of rifampicin, isoniazid, ethambutol and pyrazinamide was given to 13 patients with tuberculosis sequelae to evaluate clinical efficacy. Daily sputum collection and blood sampling were done every 2 weeks for 2 months and every month for 6 months. Side effects of the drugs were managed promptly and then they were withdrawn. Patients were followed up for 6 months. Finally, the results showed that the organism could not be detected in all the patient's sputa and that hepaecidal drugs had been effective in treating non-cavitary lesions. Moreover, antituberculosis drugs were not so toxic so that about 75% of patients could be treated successfully.China has applied to join the International Space Station (ISS), as seen by a person in a file photo of the ISS. / XINHUA China has applied to join the International Space Station (ISS), as seen by a person in a file photo of the ISS. / XINHUA China will send its first module to the International Space Station (ISS), the official state tabloid Global Times reported on Thursday. It is the first announcement from state media about the China's space program, which is viewed with suspicion in the United States. "China will launch a manned space station by the end of 2020, according to the government," China will have 30 years of uninterrupted manned space flight, Xinhua quoted it as saying. The module is expected to be launched from the State Landing Space Complex in Wenchang, Hainan Province, Reuters cited the report as saying. China has also tested its first long-range missile, which can travel around the planet and has created its own micro-satellite, the BBC reported. US research satellite and China's moon-shot China seems to have ambitious plans in space, with the country boasting the most new scientific missions in the third quarter of 2017 than any other country, according to a report by the European Space Agency. The State

Administration for Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense said in a report that China launched 13 major missions, including the world's highest-resolution space camera, which made an impressive debut on a satellite launched on August 30. "The achievements in China last quarter are impressive, but China
